

The Union Society

November 11 marked the Orthodox Union's first dinner for The Union Society, which is comprised of generous individuals who support the Orthodox Union—or any of its programs such as NCSY or Yachad—with an annual gift of $5,000 or more. The Union Society aims to bring together the Union's most important supporters for informal discussions with key national and international leaders. Professors Richard and Suzanne Stone hosted the first program in their elegant Manhattan home. The highlight of the evening was an off-the-record dialogue with Malcolm Hoenlein, executive vice chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations.

Howard Tzvi Friedman of Baltimore has been named chairman of the Union Society. The next Union Society program will take place on March 23, 2003. For more information about The Union Society, call 212-613-8140, or e-mail society@ou.org.
